

ICM Poll in Haltemprice & Howden for the Mail on Sunday

Fieldwork dates: 13th June 2008

Interview Method: Telephone.

Population effectively sampled: All adults aged 18+

Sampling Method: Within the parliamentary constituency of Haltemprice & Howden a random sample of telephone numbers was drawn from the entire BT database of domestic telephone numbers. Each number so selected had its last digit randomised so as to provide a sample including both listed and unlisted numbers.

Sample size: 501

Data weighting: Data were weighted to the profile of all adults aged 18+ (including non telephone owning households). Data were weighted by sex, age working status and social class, Targets for the weighted data were derived from census data.

The data were further weighted by declared votes in the 2005 general election. The weighting scheme is designed as follows:

Weighting by past votes

1. Respondents are asked whether they voted in the last general election and if they did, which party they voted for.
2. The sample is weighted by demographics (age, sex, etc). However, after such weighting the declared past votes may not match, exactly, the results of the last election. Partly this is because demographics (by which ICM control the sample) are relatively poorly correlated with vote behaviour. Nevertheless past vote weighting has to be used with caution as some people genuinely forget how they voted. We cannot simply weight the data to the actual results last time.

3. ICM compared the declared past votes derived in 2) above to the actual result of the last general election in Crewe and Nantwich and gave a weight of 80% to the results of the last election and 20% to the reported past votes in this survey.

ICM is therefore assuming that most of the imbalance is attributable to political imbalance in the sample rather than faulty recall. Despite the fact that since 1992 past vote weighting has improved the accuracy of polls, overall a small bias to Labour is apparent in many polls when compared to the outcome of elections. Our move to weight to 80% attributable to political imbalance (from 70%) is designed to help remove the remaining bias.

Weighting for turnout

1. ICM ask respondents to say how likely it is that they will go and vote in a new general election using a ten points scale where 10 means they would be absolutely certain to vote and 1 means they would be certain not to vote.

2. Those saying they are 7-10 certain to vote are included in the vote calculation.

Voting intentions: ICM derives vote intentions from 2 questions.

First of all respondents are asked how likely it is that they would be to go and vote in a new election.

Those who say they will vote are asked to say which party they would support in a new election. Respondents are then asked whether they voted in 2005 and which party they voted for in that election. The vote figures shown in the table are calculated after ICM has excluded those who say they will not vote, refuse to answer the question or don't know who they would vote for. The figures are adjusted for turnout calculated accordingly to their stated intentions to vote.

In a further step, ICM add 50% of those who refuse to answer the vote intention question or say they don't know to the party they voted for in 2005.

Questions: The computer tables attached in PDF format show each question, in full, in the order they were put to respondents, all response codes and the weighted and un-weighted bases for all demographics and other data including but not limited that published .

Q.5 Shadow Home Secretary David Davis has resigned as an MP over the Government's decision to allow police to detain terrorist suspects without charge for up to 42 days. He is to force a by election in his Haltemprice and Howden constituency because he says he wants to make a stand against this and the erosion of civil liberties in Britain. Do you support or oppose his actions?
